ANNUAL DANCE AND RECEPTION

Held By Bellefonte Academy in Armory of Company B.

750 GUESTS PRESENT

The Old Academy Beautifully Decorated and Illuminated With Flags and Electric Light—Smith, Stopper and Fisks Orchestras.

FURNISHED MUSIC FOR THE OCCASION

Friday nights reception at the Academy was a fitting climax for the most succesful year of its existance. The building and campus were a profusion of Japanese lanterns and electric lights. The rooms were most tastefully and beautifully decorated with ferns and evergreens, and presented a most delightful appearance. From eight until eleven o'clock a continual stream of visitors and admirers passed through the buildings, many of whom spent their childhood days at the old school, and who now have children there. There were many out of town visitors also present. The reception committee consisted of the following ladies: Mrs. J. R. Hughes, Mrs. C. S. Hughes; Miss Jennie Harper, Miss Mary Crider, Miss Overton and Miss Orvis. The ushers showed the guests through the building. The music was furnished by Christy Smith's Orchestra and was greatly appreciated. Refreshments were served at nine thirty o'clock to all present. Vocal selections were rendered by Miss Emily Basset and her little brother which brought forth great applause.

After the reception the annual Assembly took place at the Armory. Nearly one hundred and fifty couples danced to strains of the orchestra, the music being furnished by Messrs. Stopper and Fisk of Williamsport. The dancing lasted until the wee small hours of the morning, being greatly enjoyed by all present. Many guests were present from Lock Haven, State College, Williamsport, Clearfield and other places. Many magnificent and beautiful gowns were worn by the ladies, and presented a very pretty sight, as they tripped lightly over the floor. The Armory being decorated with potted plants, ferns and evergreens.

The refreshments were furnished by Caterer Ceader and were of a very pleasing and substantial nature.

The work accomplished by this school during the last three years has been wonderful. The present number of boarders being nearly double that of last year. The high standard of the Bellefonte Academy is attested by the many students who come here from many states, West Virginia, having eleven Ohio one, Deleware one and New York one. There are many who will enter college next year. Some preparing for State, U of P., Princeton, University of Tennessee, Trinity College, University of West, Va. and Cornell.

The Athletic sports for the year being unusually successful. The foot ball team being one of the best, holding State Varsity down to a 12-0 score on Beaver Field, and throughout the entire foot ball season their games were a credit to the institution. The base ball team in many respects being the best that ever represented the Academy also holding State to a 5-2 score. The Academy being especially fortunate in being able to have as their battery, Fullerton and Rollins, whose work during the entire baseball season has been highly commended by all players. The balance of the team deserve a great deal of credit for the work they performed in helping to swell the victories.

During the week the examinations are being held at this institution and the work for the past year will close, and the boys will leave for their respective homes. This has been the most successful year the Bellefonte Academy has ever experienced.

For This Paper

It is not only one dog, but there must be a dozen that amuse themselves at night, barking and driving away sleep.

The Chapel yard on Spring street is a favorite field, day and night and the varieties of canines is something wonderful. Friends and neighbors cannot you keep in your dogs.

A good sleeper.

GREETED WITH A LARGE AUDIENCE.

Miss Betty Heinle Acquits Herself in a Most Pleasing Manner.

On Tuesday evening a large audience gathered in the Petrikin Hall to hear Miss Betty Heinle who made her first appearance as a professional elocutionist before a Bellefonte crowd. It is so much easier to perform before an audience who are perfect strangers to you, than to come out on a stage and appear before your old acquaintances.

But Miss Heinle did not mind these little things and the encouragement she received by the repeated encores seemed to make her all the better. She is perfectly at home on the stage. Her voice is soft and flexable, but when necessary she can speak in a rough, harsh way. Her gestures and movements on the stage are varied, and she has complete control of herself, at times she can be graceful and pretty, and in a moments time she can transform her beauty to a being that makes the cold chills run up and down your back. One to hold an audience in a manner in which she did on Thursday evening certainly is well trained and deserves the greatest credit and praise. In her rendition of "A Spinner in the Sun," "Zingarella, the Gypsy Flower Girl of Spain," and "An Old Sweetheart of Mine," she was exceptionally fine. In "The Bear Story" and "Aunt Jerusha Visits the City," she kept the audience laughing all the time.

Miss Heinle received several beautiful bouquets of roses and carnations during the evening presented by some of her admirers.

Miss Heinle was assisted by Mrs. Blanche Derr Bubb, of Williamsport, who seemed to capture the audience with her delightful singing. She has a beautiful cultivated soprano voice and controlled it at will. She was encored after every solo which showed that the audience appreciated her singing very highly. Mrs. Bubb is the leading soprano in the First Presbyterian church at Williamsport and is claimed to be one of the best vocalist in the Lumber City. She and Miss Heinle were accompanied on the piano by Miss Marie Walsh who is considered one of the finest pianoist in Bellefonte. In the rendition of the "Christmas Greens," Miss Heinle was assisted by Miss Boggs as "Celeste."

Mr. Smith's Orchestra pleased the audience between the speaking and solos with their excellent music.

While standing at the entrance to Petrikin Hall on Thursday evening we listened to hear what the people in general had to say about the recital, and all we could hear were words of praise and admiration for Miss Heinle and Mrs. Bubb.

So we feel sure that from the start Miss Heinle has won the appreciation of the Bellefonte people, and without a doubt she will be a great success in her profession, and she should be, as she graduated with honors from the Ludlam School of Art and Elocution one of the best institutions of its kind in this country.

She Did Perfectly Right.

Late Friday afternoon a team of horses tried to pull a load of lumber up over the rocky road on Half Moon Hill and the poor beasts strained and pulled with all their might and any one with good common sense would have known that they were doing all in their power to accomplish what the driver wanted them to do. The animals were treated shamefully and when she could not withstand the brutal treatment any longer, Miss Carrie Harper who had been witnessing the affair, went to the driver and told him if he did not stop immediately she would have him arrested. The fellow didn't seem to understand and kept on, this made the young lady angry, and she told him she would give him so many minutes to unhitch and if he did not she would call an officer. The fellow soon realized what she meant and got out that.

SECOND BRIGADE ENCAMPMENT

Will go Into Camp July 20-27 Both Dates Inclusive.

TIPTON IS THE PLACE

Was Officially Made Known Last Saturday that the Second Brigade Would Encamp at Tipton.

COMPANY B, IN FINE TRIM FOR CAMP

Notwithstanding it has been repeatedly intimated during the past few weeks that the annual encampment of the Second brigade, N. G. P., would be held at Tipton station, Blair county, there could have been a slip that would have put the encampment elsewhere in the central or western part of the state. It has been known for quite a while that the Tipton site received the favorable consideration of General Wiley, commanding the Second brigade, and that he recommended it to the adjutant general of the state as the most desirable location for the encampment of his bridage. Yet the official announcement that the brigade would encamp there was not published by the adjutant general's department until Saturday, when the locations and dates designated for the three brigades of the state were officially made known.

The Second will go into camp July 20-27, both dates inclusive, at Tipton station, ten miles east of Altoona. As has been the general custom, camp will open on the morning of the 20 h with pleasing ceremonies and close on the 27th a day likely to see all the regiments with the possible exception of the Fifth, either at their home stations or enroute home. It is probable that the largest day in camp will be what is known as Governor's Day, and this is likely to fall on Thursday, July 25, an event of the eight days' camp that is most anxiously awaited by the friends of the guardsmen and thousands who until they see an encampment of this kind have little knowledge of the efficiency of the Pennsylvania National Guard. It is generally on this day that the members of the Guard and the respective regimental camps look their best.

After the close of the regular camp routine, which is not established until the day before camp by the brigade commander, there is always one regiment retained on the grounds for the purpose of seeing that everything is left in a cleanly condition. Every piece of paper, every piece of timber and all refuse is either removed or burned and it will not be surprising if the Fifth, on account of being located so close to the camp site, is the last regiment to leave camp.

The strict discipline and the guard duty will be two things that will greatly surprise the people in this section of the state that have never seen a brigade encampment. One must not imagine that the members of the National Guard can do as they please. Gen. Wiley will no doubt have a provost guard in Tyrone, Bellwood and Altoona, whose duty it will be to see that the men are out of any of the towns named in plenty of time to get to camp by evening roll call, unless a leave of absence has been secured. The guard is located in the city at the time and is generally selected from the best companies in the brigade, and it is needless to say that good order will exist. Provost guard is established in the surrounding towns from the time the advanced details commence to arrive until the end of the camp.

Possibly the leading feature, musically, of the entire National Guard of Pennsylvania is the consoldated band that its commander parades the Second brigade by. The band includes the bands of the of the Fith, Tenth, Fourteenth, Sixteenth and Eighteenth regiments, and the the drum corps also attached to the respective regiments, making a total of almost three hundred musicians under one leader. The band is located during reviews of the brigade (that occur daily) at brigade headquarter, and when playing it can be heard from the head of the brigade to its rear.

—The track team from West Virginia University arrived in Bellefonte Sunday evening and registered at the Bush House. They will play State College this week.

DEATH OF JOHN T. SEIBERT.

A Highly Respected Citizen of Benner Township Passes Away.

At 2:15 Friday morning the angel of death entered the Longwell home up Buffalo Run Valley and called away the spirit life of Mrs. Longwells father the venerable John T. Seibert. Mr. Seibert has been a patient sufferer for quite a while with heart trouble and when the end came he was waiting for the final summons to go home. He was a splendid man, an honest upright, honorable citizen, highly respected by hosts of friends. He was not only a good citizen but a Christian in every sense of the word. He was an Elder in the Presbyterian Church at Buffalo Run, also a member of the Bellefonte Lodge No. 268 F. & A. M., and of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and of the Pamona Grange of Centre Co. He was a son of the late John Seibert and was born in Benner Township September 20th 1832. He followed the useful profession of a farmer all the days of his life, and was successful in the business.

He was married to Mary Boal (now deceased) a sister of Rev. James Boal of Centre Hall. He leaves to mourn his death the following children, C. H. Seibert, State College; Mrs. Lucy Longwell, Benner Township; Mrs. Ella Dale, DuBois; Mrs. Mary Corl, State College; Mrs. Margaret Reynolds, Graysville; Mrs. Martha Goheen, Rock Springs; George Seibert, Niagara Fall.

The funeral was held on Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Services were held at the Longwell homestead.

COL. McMURTRIE PASSES AWAY.

Death Claimed him Saturday Morning at 10 O.clock.

Samuel Marshall McMurtrie passed away at his Calevills home Saturday at 10 o'clock. Perhaps Col. McMurtrie (as he was familiary known among his friends) was one of the oldest and best known citizens in Centre County. He was an old soldier and served his country faithfully during the civil war he was always known to be at his post of duty. Never shirking his share of the trails and burdens but ready to help another bear his.

He was one of the best known old hunters in Centre County, and delighted to spend his spare time rosming the hills and mountains after game. When in health Col. McMurtrie was always busy and industrious but of late years as he grew older he took life easier.

Had he lived until the 17 h of this month he would have been 77 years old He was born in Huntingdon, Huntingdon County. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, Union Veteran Legion and Gregg Post No. 95, G. A. R. He leaves to mourn his death the following children: Mrs. Mary Wertz James McMurteri and Edgar McMurtrie.

The same old friends who marched shoulder to shoulder with him when he was in the midst of the fight at Gettysburg and other battles helped lay away their old friend and comrade Col. McMurtrie on Monday afternoon. The funeral was largely attended by old soldiers and friends and all that was mortal consigned to the tomb. Rev. James B. Stein of the Methodist Episcopal church had charge of the services. The casket bearers were as follows, Messrs. Amos Garbrick, Samuel Miller, Charles Glenn John I. Curtin, Emanuel Noll and Monre Armor.

A Monster Trout

The Penfield Press tel's the following: When George R. Woodward lived at Ridgeway there also lived in the same town a big trout. The latter made his home at the town bridge and disdainfully refused all bait offered him. He had got so big that he could swim from his hiding place any time and swallow a few dozen smaller fish, enough to last him a week. But he had a foe, implacable, terrible and resourceful on his track when Mr. Woodward decided to shadow him, and here is how the monster of the pool came to his doom. His pursuer took a live mouse and hooked it in the neck. Then carefully concealing himself, he let the kicking rodent down to the water. Scarcely had the bait touched the surface and made one kick, when there was a mighty rush and splash and the mouse vanished. But the line and hook held and the big fish was caught, and it took thirty-two inches along the yardstick to equal his length.

—State College certainly must be over flowing with visitors this week as every train over the Valley is crowded.

PASSED INTO THE GREAT BEYOND.

Mrs. Patrick Martin has Entered Into Rest.

Sunshine and shadows come into every home. Death in its mysterious workings visits the young and the old, the father and mother and little loved ones. We cannot understand why Providence causes these sad things to happen and why we cannot always have sunshine in our hearts and homes, instead of the sorrow and shadows. But we are not supposed to understand why God does take away the ones we love, only submit to His Divine will. Some day these trials that seem to almost break our hearts, and the burdens that seem almost to heavy to bear will all be righted, and we will see clearly that He brought them upon us because He loved us, and wanted His children to live nearer and closer to Him.

About four weeks age Mrs. Martin gave birth to a dear little baby girl which survives, and she was getting along splendidly and really had almost recovered from the effects of her illness, but in order that she might have the constant attendance of a physician and professional nurse she was taken to the Bellefonte hospital, she was very well on Tuesday evening and sat up and talked to her husband, on Wednesday morning she had a chill that effected her spine and she gradually grew worse until death ended her sufferings on Wednesday afternoon just before three o'clock.

Mrs. Martin was a most estimable young woman and was an excellent wife and mother. She was so anxious to live just for her dear little baby's sake. Just before her death at the hospital on Wednesday she was baptized according to the Catholic Faith and had she of lived she would have joined the church.

Mrs. Patrick Martin's maiden name was Miss Tillie Keller a daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth Keller near Milesburg. She was 23 years, 1 month and 3 days old. She leaves to mourn her death, her husband and mother and the following brother and sisters, George Keller, Mrs. Chas. Gillenwhite, Mrs. Peter Kline, Mrs. Ross Brandon Mrs. Frank Spicer, Mrs. Daniel Gorden.

Saturday afternoon all that was mortal of Mrs. Patrick Martin was consigned to the tomb. Short services were held in the St. John's Catholic church where an earnest prayer was offered for the dead by Rev. Patrick McArdle. The interment was made in the Catholic cemetery. The Casket bearers were the following gentleman Messr. William and Benjamine Brown, A. E. Schad, Warren Rush, John Armstrong, and Clarence Tate.

Children's Day at the Methodist Church.

On Sunday evening the Methodist Episcopal church was crowded with people to hear the little folks sing and recite. The church was decorated in a beautiful manner and looked like a large flower garden. The young ladies and gentlemen did exceptionally well and it would be a pleasure for us to mention every little one personally but we cannot do so.

Donald Saxion, Clair Lyon, Russell Lowry, Anna Eckenroth, Ermentrude Bricker, and Martha Thomas graduated from the primary school to the higher one. The young ladies and gentlemen received a handsome bible, as a gift from the pastor Rev. James B. Stein.

A Sensible Law.

Governor Stuart has approved a bill to permit children who reside two or more miles by public road from the nearest school house in their own district to attend any more convenient school in any other district without the consent of the directors of either district, and making the district where they reside liable for the cost of tuition to the district where they attend. The new law will end the frequent controversies between school boards over the question.

JAPAN AND AMERICA

Two Problems that Must be Settled.

FEELING OF UNREST

The Racial Troubles in San Francisco Induces a Deputation from the Progressive Party to Ask Explanation.

ACCORDING TO A DISPATCH FROM TOKIO

Tokio, June 6.—A deputation from the Progressive party waited on Foreign Minister Havashi Wednesday and asked for an explanation of the government's apparent inaction and want of efficiency in the presence of grave diplomatic questions, both with China and the United States.

The former is accused of deliberately obstructing the advancement of Japanese interests in Manchuria. The deputation also called attention to facts strongly indicative or racial feeling in San Francisco against Japanese.

The deputation dwelt upon the necessity of prermptorily dealing with the question now, otherwise frequent repetitions of the acts would endanger the friendly relations of Japan and America. Minister Hayashi's reply to the deputation was kept secret.

According to a dispatch from Tokio to Reuter's Telegram company, Foreign Minister Hayashi in replying informed his visitors that the government was taking every measure necessary in regard to the diplomatic problems in connection with the United States and China.

The dispatch adds: "The Japanese officials are apprehensive of future relationship between Japan and the United States if the racial prejudices evinced at San Francisco continue.

"Printer's Pie" Don't Taste Good."

The readers of the Centre Democrat often heard of "Printer's Pie." Well, we had enough Thursday to do us the balance of our natural life, and that is the reason "The Centre Democrat" reached its readers this week a day late. One of the things we have always prided ourself in, is our success in getting this paper to our readers promptly, and we do not know of an occasion when we were unable to conform to this rule. It is said, however, that accidents will happen in the best regulated institutions and so our time came early Thursday morning. The forms were placed on the press as usual and in a minute or so after starting it the type of the first and last pages of the paper were found on the floor in a conglomerated mess. As we looked at the wreck and ruin we quickly grabbed mallet and shooting stick and cried with a loud voice, "Get Thee Behind me Satan," and he "Got" because there was not a verbal oath uttered during the whole proceedure. The accident, therefore, has caused the resetting of much of the type which kept our faithful compositors working all Thursday and late Thursday night and part of Friday to get out a respectable paper to our readers this week. On this account we were compelled to cut down the correspondence from over the county and eliminate the advertisements. There is an old saying that "A friend in need is a friend indeed," and so in this emergency, the editors of the Daily News and the Bellefonte Republican came to our rescue by giving us four or five columns of type for which we bow and take off our hat. We also express our thanks to the Watchman who kindly offered to assist us in our trouble.—Centre Democrat.

THE CLASS HISTORY.

Delivered by Miss Grimm at the Graduating Exercises Last Wednesday.

It has been said, "The first law of history is to dread uttering a falsehood; the next not to fear stating the truth, and lastly, the historian's writings should be open to no suspicion of impartiality or animosity. This, it is supposed, was uttered as a rule to be followed by those who record the rise and fall of nations and not to the records of the doings of a class for the period of four short years.

It was on a beautiful day in the fall of 1903 that we wended our way for the first time up the hill to the Bellefonte High School. Our first class roll numbered thirty-one and within a few days all the boys had been duly initiated. This is a most barborous and brutal treatment which the High School boys still think necessary to administer to the new members.

Our corps of teachers for this year consists of Mr. Meyer, Miss Craighead and Miss Levy and while working under these teachers we acquired such knowledge as is necessary for the Ds' to have to enter the higher class.

We were noted for being the freshest class that ever entered the school for with little delay we had organized and elected our officers. O, the memory of those class meetings! We selected our colors, red and black by a unanimous vote and in a short time our penant was hung on the walls of the school room.

The class of 1905 gave a Valentine social in the High School rooms in the spring of 1904 and we, the Ds' proudly wearing our colors, attended. The class of 1906 then Cs' became very indignant but not being able to divest us of our colors they followed our example by putting on their own, gray and gold.

During the year a number of our members had fallen out and one among this number, Richard Brouse, having a strong desire to travel the seas had gone away on a school ship. Returning from the first cruse he came here to visit his parents. After being with his parents for a short time he went down to Philadelphia to join his comrades. Arriving in Philadelphia he proceeded to the wharf but after looking around awhile and not being able to see the school ship he began to think that home was the best place after all so he came back to Bellefonte. The class gave him a surprise party but Dick was so bashful that he did not attend. We had a delightful time but from all appearances we scared Dick quite thoroughly for he never came back to school.

This school year ended as all years do and it is quite probable that everyone was glad that they had passed through the embarassing position of being Ds'.

In the fall of 1904 we returned with twenty-two of our old members and yet another, a stranger from Milesburg, Miss Ivah Meyer joined us at this time and has been with us ever since.

Mr. Meyer and Miss Levy still retained the same positions as in the previous year and Mr. Wagner, the faithful teacher of our class in the Senior Grammar School greeted us here again, he having taken Miss Craighead's position as first assistant.

It was now that we began to toil with the study of Ancient and Mediaeval History, with debts and credits and the mysteries of Algebra. Mr. Etters, then supervising principal of the Bellefonte Schools, taught a section of our class in Algebra. It was certainly wonderful how Mr. Etters prevailed on one of this section, Henry Dickinson, to work those clock problems after Henry had declared that he could not do it. Henry did not believe in doing any unnecessary work and he could not see how Algebra would help him in the jewelry business, his chosen occupation.

It was discovered in January that there was a case of small-pox in the school and the scare this discovery gave us proved to be the greatest event of our second year although at all times the members of the High School might have been found working over some difficult task which in the aggregate made up the great exhibition which was held in Petrikin Hall in June.

This exhibition closed the work of this term and we parted for our three months vacation.

Roth and George Wagner moved away during the summer and a few of our members decided not to come back so in September 1905 we reassembled with a class of fifteen.

Margaret Burnett and Isabel Merriman entered the class and Blair Fisher, who after being a member of the Senior class or a short time, decided that he liked our class better so he joined us also.

Mr. Wagner had taken Mr. Meyer's positions Principal of the High School and Mr. Hosterman had succeeded Mr. Wagner. Miss Levy retained the same position as formally.

We started into work with renewed zeal but about the middle of the term we could have been seen exhausting this energy in searching for the history of and writing a thesis on the Reformation.

On April 9th was held the Junior Preliminary Contest to which the whole class was eligible. The school room was decorated for the occasion and standing out most prominent from among the other decorations was the class flag. This flag, designed by Clair Seibert was made by some of the girls out at Hale's. It stands second only to the flag of our nation.

Soon after the contest there was another thesis to be written. This thesis was on Slavery and while watching the present Juniors working a short time ago, on the same theme we could not but liken them unto ourselves.

In connection with Botany, one of the most delightful studies in the course, Miss Levy usually takes the botany students out on a trip in search of flowers. She delighted the rest of the class much last year when she invited all to go with them. We started from Linn Street and went down to McCoy's furnace, from there we traveled over the mountain to Snow Shoe Intersection and thence to Milesburg. We were entertained at supper at Miss Levy's home and returned home on the 8:16 train having learned much and having had a most delightful time.

The final contest was held in Petrikin Hall on June 4. The first prize was awarded to Miss Helen Stover and the second to Miss Leah Woodson.

Upon returning from our vacation in the fall we found that although we had ended the Junior year with but fifteen we began the Senior year with eighteen. The reasons for this addition were these; Paul Fishburn wishing to get through High School quickly had worked hard during the summer and entered our class, a most noble thing to do! Benjamin Swartz, a graduate of the Hublersburg High School, thinking he could teach us much, O pardon me Ben, learn much during this year decided to go to school here and John Rankin, well John had formally been a member of the class of 1906 but he had taken a years vacation so finished his course with our class. We found Mr. Wagner and Miss Levy as in the previous year but Mr. Dunning filled Mr. Hosterman's position, the latter having gone to Philipsburg to teach in the High School there.

With the exception of Algebra all our studies this year were new. We soon became very well acquainted with them and especially so with Physics.

One day at the close of the Physics period Mr. Wagner said we should all assemble in the big room as there was a gentleman there who wished to give us some music. We went out with large expectations and Professor Snell was introduced to the school, after playing some of the most popular songs on a mouth organ he passed his hat around and departed.

The class had a straw ride on November 2nd and we were entertained at the home of Miss Helen Stover one of our classmates. "In my Merry Oldsmobile" was sung so often during the evening that it was adopted by the class. We returned home at 2.30 a. m. after spending a most delightful evening and having had plenty of good things to eat.

The Christmas orations were delivered by the class December 21. This event immediately preceeded our Christmas vacation. The last of January we had our examinations and then started in our last four months of school.

Mr. Alfred Montgomery, the artist gave a talk on art up at school some time ago and in the course of his talk beside giving us much good advice he said to Mr. Wagner, "Professor take care of the red heads for something will surely come of them." After that John was continually hovering around the rooms in which Mr. Montgomery was situated.

On the evening of March 27th a number of the Seniors met at the High School Rooms and decorated for the Easter orations. We had a good time and did not start home till rather late but then that was before the curfew was passed.

After the delivery of the orations, which occurred the next day, we settled down to eight weeks of hard work.

There are many popular sayings in the outside work but the phrase most frequently heard in our little world this winter was "Norman, take the front seat please." In justice to Norman we will confess it was oftimes the fault of the girls and we will also commend him on the noble way in which he bore his punishment.

Early in the term we lost three of our members, Margaret, Isabel, and Paul and later in the term Rose Beezer stopped on account of circumstances which made it necessary for her to be at home. We were sorry to loose these friends and hope they will find something in life to compensate for their having missed the pleasure of graduating with us from the Bellefonte High School.

We do not think we prevaricate when we say there is nothing the fourteen members of the class of 1907 enjoy more then being spoken of as a class but each one has his own individuality and of each we will speak individually.

Blair Fisher is our class president and as every one must realize he is quite capable of filling the chair. We hear, and it is a confirmed fact, that he is very brave if he chances to meet some wild animals on his numerous trips over the mountain to Yarnell.

It was in Literature one day that Mr. Meyer chanced to ask Miss Elizabeth Barnhart where Columbus landed and Lizzie thoughtfully answered, "At Plymouth Rock."

While studying about the rainbow in Physics Mr. Wagner remarked that there was no rainbow till after the flood and then he asked Norman when the flood occurred and Norman promptly replied, "In 1889."

Miss Helen Robb was so attached to the class that the last day we met in our regular classes she declared that she was going home to take a good cry.

One day while working in the laboratory the light of our class, John Alexander Rankin could not understand why there was no electrical current through the batteries and on being shown that he did not have the circuit closed he became very much embarrassed. It was surmised that John was thinking whether the weather would be favorable for a walk down to Milesburg after school.

A short time ago Mr. Meyer seeking some valuable information said that he would have to look in the minutes of the class meetings and find out how it was entered there, Miss Harriet Ray, class secretary, asked, "What minutes?" We will forgive Harriet for this break for she always was needed at home right after school if there was a class meeting on hand.

Miss Leah Woodson is of quite a literary turn of mind for she has just finished writing a play and at all times can recite litcrature by the half hour.

Ben Swartz is very fond of an argument but it has been whispered around that he is still more fond of a certain young lady in the D class.

Jane and Elsie are almost inseparable and when ever there is any excitement they are always first on the spot. In truth they are hard to beat.

Clair Seibert is the artist of the class. A large picture of the seal of Pennsylvania, the work of his hand, hangs on the wall in the rear of where the class was seated in the High School. Jim may be an artist but he is surely a person of many moods and few words.

Some time this spring Miss Ivah Meyer went to spend the week end at Lemont and to attend a banquet given there. At first she wondered as she and her friend drove along why everyybody looked at them but all at once she realized that it was an Odd Fellow beside her.

It was just during our Final exams that Miss Helen Stover sat up till the wee small hours studing and as a recompense for this great loss of sleep she got a hundred in Algebra.

The fourteenth member is satisfied to be spoken of only in connection with the class.

We have now reached the end of our High School days and also the end of the History of the class of 1907. Henceforth each one will make his own history without the inspirations which class association furnished.

—The reason why we are willing to stand back of our work is because we know exactly what goes into our Paint, and hire only experienced mechanics to apply it.

Keep the Balance Up.

It has been truthfully said that any disturbance of the even balance of health causes serious trouble. Nobody can be too careful to keep this balance up. When people begin to lose appetite, or to get tired easily, the least imprudence brings on sickness, weakness, or debility. The system needs a tonic, craves it, and should not be denied it; and the best tonic of which we have any knowledge in is Hood's Sarsaparilla. What this medicine has done in keeping healthy people healthy, in keeping up the even balance of health, gives it the same distinction as a preventive that it enjoys as a cure. Its early use has illustrated the wisdom of the old saying that a stitch in time saves nine. Take Hood's for appetite, strength and endurance.

"The Blood is The Life."

Science has never gone beyond the above simple statement of scripture. But it has illuminated that statement and given it a meaning ever broadening with the increasing breadth of knowledge. When the blood is "bad" or impure it is not alone the body which suffers through disease. The brain is also clouded, the mind and judgement are effected, and many an evil deed or impure thought may be directly traced to the impurity of the blood. Foul, impure blood can be made pure by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It enriches and purifies the blood thereby curing, pimples, blotches, eruptions and other cutaneous affections, as eczema, tetter, or salt-rheum, hives and other manifestations of impure blood.

In the cure of scrofulous swellings, enlarged glands, open eating ulcers, or old sores, the "Golden Medical Discovery" has performed the most marvelous cures. In cases of old sores, or open eating ulcers, it is well to apply to the open sores Dr. Pierce's All-Healing Salve, which possesses wonderful healing potency when used as an application to the sores in conjunction with the use of "Golden Medical Discovery" as a blood cleansing constitutional treatment. If your druggist don't happen to have the "All-Healing Salve" in stock, you can easily procure it by inclosing fifty-four cents in postage stamps to Dr. R. V. Pierce, 663 Main St., Buffalo, N. Y., and it will come to you by return post. Most druggists keep it as well as the "Golden Medical Discovery."

You can't afford to accept any medicine of unknown composition as a substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery," which is a medicine OF KNOWN COMPOSITION, having a complete list of ingredients in plain English on its bottle-wrapper, the same being attested as correct under oath.

Daily Duty.

I mean specially a local Daily and those in positions to read it.

"Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself" is a prime precept of the Christ Saviour in his gospel How can any one heed that Christian injunction without knowing something about the situation of "thy neighbor?" A local Daily is published so that all citizens may know "thy neighbor's" need to meet it; "thy neighbor's" joys and sorrows to share them. It is my mature conviction that our first attention should be given to the nearest "neighbor"—hood. Christ so taught his disciples before he commissioned them to "go into all the world," etc. Is it not plain that every "neighbor" should have some Daily information in order to do his daily duty?

A prominent business man of our town, (and a kind, hearted man he is) whose "neighbor" met with a serious accident, almost fatal and still in bed, knew nothing about it more than a week after its occurrence. The local Daily had published the account more than once.

It Does Look Funny

To see young men running loose on the streets with their pantaloons turned up nearly to their knees. Of course they wear pretty socks and nice garters, but my oh my boys it does look disgusting. Why you don't see the ministers, lawyers, doctors and good sound minded people of the town doing anything of the like, and then lately we have noticed young men running all over the town down to the train, and every where, with out any hats on their heads. Now don't that look funny? It may be what they call "style" to wear your pants around your knees and go without a hat, but goodness gracious deliver us from the style.

Mad Bull on Rampage.

There was considerable excitement in the usually quiet village of Salona on Tuesday afternoon, caused by the unruly antics of a mad bull on its way to the slaughter house and during its brief but turbulent career two lives were in jeopardy. The frenzied animal was finally brought to bay by a bullet from a gun.

Arthur Reigle was leading the bull from the Rirker & Reigle stables to the slaughter house where it was to be converted into steaks and roasts. Mr. Bull seemed to scent trouble in the air, for with his head down and tail up he broke loose from Mr. Reigle and started down the main street with terrific speed. When in front of the W. F. Herr store that gentleman grabbed the rope and attempted to stop the animal. The bull charged on him and knocked him to the ground. Mr. Herr's head was badly cut above the right eye.

The frenzied animal then continued its wild run down the street and broke into the garden of Register and Recorder W. A. Snyder, a short distance below where Mr. Herr had his encounter. Here Samuel Tate endeavored to drive the ferocious bull into Mr. Snyder's barn by means of a pitch fork but he too, soon had to seek safer quarters, for with a roar the animal made for him and attempted to knock him down. There it was that the bull met its match for Harry Houts appeared on the scene with his trusty rifle. Taking deliberate aim he sent a bullet reeking through the excited brain of the bull and his fun was over for all time.

The Shell

The shell found near the Dale barn, on Nittany Mountain, may or may not have been the one that contained the charge that killed Josiah C, Dale, November 12th. At least it was an innocent looking shell, and lay in the Reporter office from within a few days after it was found until a short time before the May term of court. When the authorities learn all there is known about the finding of the shell, some of the importance of the incident may disappear.

Linda's Lovers

By MARTHA McCULLOCH-WILLIAMS.

Copyright, 1907, by Mary McKeon.

"Linda, do tell a fellow how you do it. You're no beauty—positively, your nose is a snub—yet here you have Lowton's three best beaus so fascinated they won't look at another girl when you're around."

Derry's voice was judicial, but the twinkle in his eyes belied its measured note. Linda Bryson chose to answer the eyes rather than the words.

"Unless you stop being tiresome I shall call Aunty Pam," she said. "I know she is dying to have you tell her all about the Greer funeral."

"Say, do you know there's a law against cruel and unusual punishments?" Derry asked, with an accent of deep injury.

"Is there? Dear me! How do you happen to know it—being a lawyer?" Linda flung back at him. "People say, you know, that the less law you have the more cases you win."

"People in this case meaning Phil Gray. I didn't think he's be so nasty over the drubbing I gave him," Derry said tranquilly. "I shall have to look out for myself. Unless old Phil had been more than professionally jealous he never in the world would have said such a thing."

"Why should he be jealous of—anybody? We're engaged—have been since last Thursday."

Linda pouted. Derry breathed hard just once, then caught both her hands and pressed them warmly, saying: "I see, you had to console the boy. He was pretty crestfallen when he left the courthouse that afternoon. Of course I wish you joy—all kinds of joy—double riveted, copper fastened, and I congratulate him with all my heart. But, honestly, Lin, are you sure"—

"Sure of what?" Linda asked saucily, though with the least shake of the voice.

"Why, that you love Phil well enough to live with him all your life?" Derry began.

"Are you sure you love Julia Moore that way?" Linda countered.

Derry stared at her. "Julia Moore! What has she got to do with it?" he asked.

Linda flung up her head.

"She must have a heap to do with it, since you are going to marry her.

HE HELD HER FACING HIM AND LOOKED HER FULL IN THE EYES.

Hush!" as she saw Derry about to whistle. "I know. She told me so herself."

"When?" Derry asked, his voice low and steady. Linda tried to look reflective, but her blushes betrayed her. "It was—some time last week," she stammered at last. "We were coming home together"—

"From the courthouse. I saw you there listening to the speeches," Derry interrupted. Then, with a quizzical smile: "With such authority I must of course agree. All the same, Linda, I thought you understood—that you—you were playing with the others so as to wait for me. I couldn't speak out until I had got from under the load of my father's debts."

"Julia can free you. That was why," Linda began, then stopped short, her eyes on the fire. After a minute she went on clearly: "I had to think you were tired of an uphill fight. Besides, you were free as air. There had never been a word between us."

"No—worse luck," Derry said, rising and walking twice across the room. It was big and dim, full of faded furniture, the tiny, scantily filled grate set in the big chimney breast speaking eloquently of the change from a time of hospitable plenty. Aunt Pam had the house; Linda, a narrow income. Therefore they lived without work, as became gentlewomen born, though Linda was more than a little restive.

"What if I am a born Bryson? It won't hurt me to trim hats or make cotillion favors for play? Goodness knows I do enough of it for—invitations and 'Thank you, dear.' And I do believe the very people that impose on me would think more of me if I charged them round prices," she had said more than once. But always Aunt Pam and Aunt Pam's ideas had prevailed. The one way out was marriage—with some good steady fellow of decent patrimony and the knack of getting on in the world.

Phil Gray had both, hence stood high with Aunt Pam. She liked Allen Derry well enough. His mother had been her dearest friend. But there were the debts—the only thing Judge Derry had left his son. A spotless reputation, of course, did not count against lack of financial foresight. The judge had been beguiled not only into risking his own money, but into giving his neighbors bad advice. It was the neighbors Allen was paying, although they had not the least shadow of legal claim. Phil Gray had said it was "magnificent, but not business." Aunt Pam agreed with him heartily. Still, she had been always motherly kind to Allen, having no suspicion of what was in his heart and Linda's.

Allen stopped his pacing abruptly and said, looking over Linda's head: "Phil is a good chance, also a good fellow. I hope he'll make you happy as the day is long. I know he'll try. But—tell me, have you put on his ring?"

"Not yet," Linda said very low. Derry caught her hands and drew her to her feet. He held her facing him and looked full in her eyes as he said brokenly: "Then—give me—one little inch of—love. I know you love me—even as I love you. We wrong nobody—I shall no more than kiss you—once. All I want is to have you look up at me from my breast and say, 'Allen, I love you—with the love that casteth out all fear.'"

"Allen, I love you with the love that casteth out all fear," Linda repeated submissively, laying her head against his shoulder. His arms infolded her. For a long minute they stood silent, trembling through and through with a sense of sacred farewells. Then Allen bent and kissed her, saying gently as he put her away from him, "Remember, no matter what happens here, you are mine through all eternity."

"Goodby," Linda said, her voice clear and unshaken. "Goodby," Allen echoed and turned toward the door. It stood open, inframing Phil Gray, whose face was very white, but whose eyes were steady and kindly. He came to the two at the hearth with outstretched hands, saying: "I did not mean to spy on you; but, thank God, I heard. The mistake that has been made is not past undoing. Linda, I set you free. Now choose between us."

With a happy cry, Linda put her hand in Derry's and hid her blushes upon his breast. Gray drew a hard breath, but smiled gallantly and asked: "Are you surprised to see me here? I am surprised to be here. But there's a reason for it. Allen, old man, read that. It came to us an hour back. You know our firm settled up your father's affairs."

Allen took the yellow slip, but the words on it danced before him. It was Phil's last good office to read to him that the mine, so long held worthless, had turned out to be marvelously rich. All the money that had been sunk in it would come back a hundredfold.

"You'll be rich, you two—so rich you can buy all Lawton," he said at last, smiling. Linda held out her hand to him. So did Derry as together they said, "And be sure we will marry and live happy ever after."

Man at the Helm.

There was no doubt in the minds of people who knew the Camerons as to who was the head of the house in every sense of the word. So accustomed were the Camerons, large and small, to look to "father" for advice and opinions on every subject that they unconsciously afforded more or less amusement to their friends.

"Do you mind this extreme cold weather, Mrs. Cameron?" some one asked her one icy winter day, and the little lady smiled cheerily.

"Oh, father says it's much healthier for everybody than last winter," she answered. "He says we all feel much better than we did."

"Indeed!" said the friend, with a spice of malice. "I thought I heard that all of you except Mr. Cameron had been quite ill with throat troubles."

"Yes, so we have," admitted the adoring wife, "but as father says, he knows just when we got our colds. It was that time the weather changed so suddenly while he was in New York, and he doesn't intend to let it happen again."—Youth's Companion.

Rackets.

There is a good deal of simplicity about the game of rackets, but it is so fast that one has to move into position rapidly, hit rapidly and recover rapidly. The movements of a player must be almost instinctive. This is the reason why those who learn the game very young have better prospects. The greatest mistake of men who take up rackets in this country is that they often learn bad form at the start, which only the most careful practice will enable them to ever overcome. As a matter of fact a good many of our players do not care to take the time for such practice. Bad footwork and a poor wrist are the causes of the downfall of nearly all of our second and third class players. Plenty of men, physically well equipped for the most strenuous rackets, will peg along for years and never learn the game properly, simply because they began badly and either have never taken the trouble or do not know how to correct their faults.—George H. Brooke in Outing Magazine.

Exactly.

A good English country mayor found himself at table in a large restaurant between two young men, who began to make fun of him.

"I see, young sirs," he said, "that you are making fun of me, but I assure you that I am neither stupid nor an ass."

"Ah," said one of them, "perhaps you are between the two."

"Exactly," was the prompt reply, "I'm between the two."

Saving a Cab Fare.

Here's a pretty tale of domestic economy from an English paper. He had been brought up in the lap of luxury and extravagance, and when bad times came and he had to go down to the city and look carefully after his shillings it was his pretty and tender little wife who helped him and encouraged him by example in small savings. One fence he never would face. He balked at taking a bus. "It might pass the club, you know, dear, and the fellows at the windows." One evening, however, he returned radiant to dinner. Tenderly embracing his life's partner, he murmured: "I've done it, darling! All the way for threepence!" Love and gratitude were in her eyes as she said: "My brave boy! Did you mind it very much?" With affectionate cheeriness he made answer: "No, dear! Got box seat; real good old sort, the driver. Told me lots of stories and was quite chatty. Capital chap! Gave him a big cigar and half a crown for himself when I got down."

How Frost Affects Plants.

Plants do not freeze to death in winter, but perish from thirst. The process is simple. The cold causes the withdrawal of the water from the cells of the plant, forming ice crystals outside of the cells. The frost, cooling and contracting the surface, acts as a sort of pump, and as soon as the cell is emptied of its life giving fluid the plant dies. The truth of this theory has been proved by numerous careful experiments. Great variation was found in the amount of cold necessary to cause the death of vegetation. Some plants dry out quickly and are killed before the freezing point is reached. Many plants will survive zero weather, and some die only at 20 degrees below. Certain vegetable growths never freeze. There are forms of bacteria that even when immersed in liquid air, the intensest cold available, come out of their bitter bath as chipper and lively as ever.—Chicago Tribune.

Precious Plant Stones.

Among the many strange things to be found in the Philippine Islands are the so called "plant stones" encountered now and again in certain vegetable growths. The bamboo, for instance, according to Kultur und Natur, contains a stone very similar to the opal, but on account of the rarity with which it is found it is much more costly than the opal. In many thousand cane stalks cut down and carefully examined there may perhaps be one in which this beautiful greenish pink scintillating stone has been formed from the minute particles of siliceous deposit that imparts its intense hardness to the outer covering of the cane. The bamboo cane stone is known as tabashirs. In the interior of some cocoanuts a stonelike secretion is found that is not inferior in brilliancy to the most beautiful genuine pearl.

Wonderful Builders.

A personal inspection of the pyramids made by an English quarry owner led him to the conclusion that the old Egyptians were better builders than those of the present day. He found blocks of stone in the pyramids weighing three or four times as much as the obelisks on the banks of the Nile. He saw a stone the estimated weight of which was 800 tons. Many of the stones were found to be thirty feet in length and fitted so closely together that the blade of a penknife could be run over the surface without discovering the break between them. There is no machinery, he claims, so perfect that it will make two surfaces thirty feet in length which will meet together in unison as the stones in the pyramids meet.

Ruskin to an Admirer.

Ruskin, it is known, had his own ways of publishing his works, with the result that they were sometimes hard to get and expensive. According to the Great Central Railway Journal, he once sent this letter to a stranger who wrote to him complaining of the price of his books:

54 Woodstock Road, Oxford, 4th Nov., '84.

My Dear Sir—I have ordered my publisher to send you in gift a book of mine ("Munera Pulveris") you have not read. Be content with that at present, and Carlyle. Have not you Shakespeare, cheap? And the Bible nowadays for nothing? What good do they do you? Faithfully yours, J. RUSKIN.

Deafness Cannot be Cured.

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

Old Farmer Jones Says.

I started to town this morning on the train, but when I got to Fillmore I got off the train and walked into town, as I wanted to get here before the banks closed, besides I had so much stuff to get at the stores for my wife and neighbors that it took a whole roll of toilet paper to mark the articles on, one man wanted me to bring him a bushel of clover seed so as to save the express charges, and several others asked me to get a few things like this, go into McClures and bring me a horse collar and a quarters worth of bread, a churn from Potter & Hay, roll of carpet from Joseph's, gallon can of mowing machine oil from the Atlantic Refining Co. One roll of poultry netting at Olewines, well I just stopped and said I would try and bring them all along if I could, that what I would forget my wife could get the next day.

The last time I was in town it was snowing and I said to my wife when I got home "Sarah" do you know while I was in Bellefonte the people had grate fires—"Land sakes" said she (before I could finish telling her in their stoves) you don't say so, just think how cold how the people must have suffered. Jones you get right out and gather up some provisions and take down, you know how scarce some people are of meat and potatoes. Oh my, I can't help but think that some babies have been burned up, oh Jones what will they do. Just then I said "Sarah there was no houses burned, they just had fire in their grates on account of the cold weather, then she began to realize what I meant."

I was comin to town the other night for some colic cure for the baby and when near that place where they take sick people, I saw that there Doc Fravel chewing the fence palins, and when I got nearder I saw he had Henney's girl talking to her. I told him I thought it was pretty blame mean for him to take that er young fellers girl, when he had so many at home to look after.

Old Farmer Jones Says.

On our comin back from Snow Shoe we stopped, we got off and walked a head of the train and was passing a "Creamery" when Sarah says Jones lets go in and see whose entered there. They certainly put some funny things on them head stones in olden times such as here lies the remains of an honest Black-smith or Farmer or Merchant but I'll be dod blasted if I seen any saying here lies the remains of an "honest Lawyer" may be none of them is dead yet as they are all about as slow to depart as a candidate but Joe Barton who was looking up some of his ancestors called my attention to one particular stone that read like this,

Here lies the mother of twenty-eight,
She might of had more
But now its to late.

I felt so sorry for her but had to hurry down to the next switch to catch the train

Saturday evening when I made a call at a certain house I found too ladies calling, of course they were married, one complained she had an ingrown toenail and suffered great pain. I told her I was a chicken doctor and could possibly relieve her trouble if I could see the nail, she said O, K. and after extracting her No. 7 shoe I discovered what was wrong and said madam "don't you know" that nails cannot grow through leather and the only thing that nail could do was to turn around and grow toward the light the same as a plant would do in a dark room.

Now sir I just want to say that I have solved the cheap fare question on railroads, should the supreme Court Rule that the two cent fare laws is unconstitutional, let the fare stand at three cents per mile, you can then as now ride thirty three miles for one dollar the R R cannot raise their rate? Now I suggest to set a day, say the fourth of July and let everybody double up the price on everything first wages and next wheat, corn, meat, clothing, tobacco, whiskey, lemons yeast, force and shredded wheat biscuit, now you see a man who works for two dollars a day now will be getting four dollars and can buy the same amount of groceries for a days work as he could before, then think how much the merchants would make in the raise it would help them out and the railroads well, for a days work a fellow could just travel so far because the R R would not dare to raise their fare at least any charters granted in the future could be given at a fixed rate? Now I am holding my corn with the expectation that the people will join me in setting a day to double things up now I firmly believe this is Pres. Roosevelts idea and it is possibly what Brian ment by the fifty cent dollar, see dollars would be twice as plenty of course when you get your girl a soda water it would cost twenty cents instead of ten.

Well I'll hen pecked if their aint a preacher in town can stand more than any Texas cow boy. It was reported that one of our good Brethren was shot at Lewistown, run over by a train at Lewistown held up and robbed on the mountain and kicked by a horse all the same day and still he lives, he reminds me when I was making a trip through New Jersey a body was found on the shore and the law required a Coroner's Jury as the man had a deep wound on the back of the head, a colored Jury was impanelled and the verdict was that the deceased came to his death by a blow on the back of the head first; given by some person or persons unknown to the Jury; then he was thrown over board and drowned, second- thirdly he was washed ashore and friz to death.

Say Mr. Editor do you know I was at church on Sunday night and the first thing I saw was a card, this is "Envelope Day," well sir every day will be Sunday by and by, but every Sunday is "Envelope Sunday," now a days. Say I saw the biggest fiddle on Sunday and a man played it with something just like a meat saw.

He was thusking some corn in his barn floor when Andy Tate come in and said Jones it seems to me you are late getting your corn husked; well said Jones people all tell me that, but I am getting along and can only husk about eighty bushels a day, and help is mighty scarce. All the young men think about is playing base ball, then Andy spoke up and said he could husk one hundred bushels in a day; now see here Andy that ain't so you could no more husk corn all day than them children who come down from Altoona on Saturday to play the Academy team could get a single run," said Jones and kept on husking? Then said Jones; Andy I think this will be my last year farmin on the sheers as them tarnal Land Lords in Bellefonte want every thing and me pay the taxes beside, then they are always growling about me being behind with my work. I went to see about renting another farm a few days ago and the Land Lord said Jones your wife Sarah is all right on a farm but seems to me you do more farming on the public road than you do at home so I guess we will have to quit. I had the promis of a hired girl, but she would not come unless my wife would do all the milking, churning, dish washing, scrubbing, and make the beds. Then she wanted the privilege to have company three nights a week and the afternoon off besides she wanted enough cream to make ice cream and bake a cake twice a week for her beau, and then she was not sure whether she would come to live with us unless we would move near to town as it was so far for her beau to come. She was afraid he might miss a night. Said I Sarah, we better take her to make sure we have a girl, but Sarah just put up one finger and I knew what was coming, she said Jones I ain't keeping boarders just put that in your Bill Nye Head? I kept boarders once and that done me, they wanted green peas and ripe peaches on the second day of January, pie every meal and cake, and such eaters they would snip at everything. One year we killed an old beef, Jones said she was old and we could just dry her whole and hang her up in the wood house and have chipped beef all summer and some of the boarders actually said the meat was so tough they could not cut the gravy. Then Jones them air city girls from Lock Haven that come up to recuperate always seemed to me they acted so funny. They seemed to think you had charge of the house, how they use to hollow down the stairs, would Mr. Jones please hand us up a pitcher of water, and keep you standing in the hall for half an hour waitin for the empty pitcher and I would have to sit down stairs all by myself with no one to talk to, no sir Mr. Jones I'll take no summer boarders. Then Jones looked up over his glasses and said Sarah I forgot to get kindling for the morning fire and started for the wood house, wondering when the next picnic would be held at Hecla Park.

Sarah said I its been a tarnal long time since we had a car ride, lets go some place, well said she lets go to Snow Shoe so we agreed to go and come to town this morning. Well said Sarah I'll be blasted if I didn't forget to water the chicks before I left home. lets go back, it makes me so sick to ride on the train but Sheriff Shearer was standing there and said just you put a piece of plain white paper inside of your dress on your chist and you will never get sick when you ride on the cars. So I asked a young man who had a fat face like a girls where the baggage man was, he said he was the man and the ticket feller I'm him and the telegraph man I'm him and the conductor I'm him said he. I run a mixed train and also act as baggage master while on the train and do the braking.

Land sakes says Sarah I'll bet that fellow gets about 20 dollars a month and if he would die the R. R. would have to shut down. I just said give me two tickets to Snow Shoe, when the agent said "return tickets." Land sakes says Sarah what do we want with return tickets, we are here now but I explained he meant tickets both ways.

Sarah had got a dozen bananas for John Reesers children at Snow Shoe but when we were on the train she gave the whole poke of them to a poor little boy that looked so hungry and fifty cents also to get some candy when he got off, it was the last money she had. Then the train stopped at gum stump and Mr. Dale got on board and I heard Sarah say who is that little boy over yonder, well said Mr. Dale that is W. H. Vanderbuilt's only son he is worth over a hundred million dollars. Sarah dropped her head and wispered to me don't say anything Jones when we get home. Well say if you would see Snow Shoe you would think the State ought to build some State roads, why their streets are nearly as bad as sheep street in Bellefonte from Hastings up to Bill Mussers.

I see the Legislature has passed a law that you must put collars on your dogs or they will be shot by the governor. Well if I catch him up around my house hunting for dogless collars I'll refer him to some of them brainless fellows that built the State Capitol. There was a hairless fellow riding a chainless bicycle up here a few days ago, he said he was a lightning rod man but I heard of them fellers before so I just got a prongless pitch fork and sent him dustless down the road to the sick house.

By the way Mr. Editor I was going out past the sick house Friday night, and it was pretty late when I noticed to the fellow down by the depoe who sells peanuts and pop sitting in the park in front and from what I noticed he was very much taken up with one of them er women that wares them starched aprons and coney-copes on there heads.

Well spose Bill Carson will be rich one of these days, as he is going to be the next Sheriff of Centre County. I don't take much stock in politics but says I to Bill, Bill I am mighty glad to hear that the democrat party is goin to put you up for this office, and I'll be tarnation if I don't vote for you, but as I am a probitionist I don,t want you to tell my wife Sarah as she is certainly down on the republican and democratic parties. But I know Bill will make a mighty good sheriff and I'm goin to get all the farmers up my way I can to vote for him.

Sarah and I was starting home the other day from Irwin's Racket store, after she had spent 25 cents buying a lot of trinkets for our oldest boy who is 20, and when coming down high street that fellow that run the democrat paper up town was scorting water through a hose on the road, and Sarah just said what shame to waste the water in that way, just then two women came along, and he scored the water all over the women's feet and backs, Sarah says that's better than wastin it on the road.

I don't like to talk about people but I do think a man whose got a wife and family should stay at home and not be running after other women a good many in Bellefonte can smoke this in their pipes A feller from Logon street was up to my place the other day after some boys and he told me and Sarah that a married man in Bellefonte who holds a good position and a single feller who holds another good position was coasing up on this street at quite late hours after one of those flip Bellefonte gals. Now taint right and taint accordin to scripture.

An Officer Sentenced to the Pen.

C. P. Loughhead, the Clearfield county constable who was convicted for the killing of a man he had placed under arrest whose attempted escape led to the shooting, is to be taken to the penitentairy this week to serve his term of one year and six months. This was the sentence imposed by the court after Loughhead's trial and conviction. The case was appealed to the Supreme Court and judgment affirmed.

The higher tribunal in its refusal to reverse the verdict of the lower court said: "While in the case of a misdemeanor an officer is never required to retreat and may meet force with force, he can not justifiably take the life of a person who is fleeting from arrest or of any person who has been arrested and has escaped from custody"

"In Wharton on Homicides, 3rd 1907, page 741, it is said: An officer has no right to shoot a person who is merely running away from him without any violence, when under arrest or to avoid arrest for a misdemeanor. He must at least stop short of force which will result in the sacrifice of human life; and a killing in such a case is manslaughter at least."

Loughhead has made application for a pardon and the case will be heard on June 19th.

Big Fire at Nittany.

A disastrous fire occurred at 2 o'clock Wednesday morning in the east end of Nittanyvalley, which resulted in a considerable monetary loss and also the incineration of live stock.

At that hour the large barn owned by John Snyder, father of Register and Recorder W. A. Snyder was discovered to be burning fiercely. Neighbors on the adjoining farms ran to the Snyder farm and assisted in extinguishing the small fires that had ignited several other buildings on the premises, but all efforts to save the barn or live stock were futile and the result was that 3 horses, 2 colts, 13 shoats and two calves were roasted alive. Another old family horse managed to get out in the barnyard in some manner but was so badly burned that it is likely that it will have to be shot.

A very fortunate occurrence was the fact that the fine herd of cows were, this night roaming about the barnyard, instead of being in their stalls, as is customary, or they too would have been cremated.

Aside from the loss of the live stock, all of last season's crop of wheat, hay, oats and considerable corn was burned. The corn crib was set on fire several times but was extinguished by neighbors.

All the harness, a binder and a wagon loaded with bags of chop were destroyed besides a number of minor articles used about the farm.

The monetory loss is about $3,500, but the loss of some of the favorite horses of Mr. Snyder which he raised on that farm, is indeed unfortunate inasmuch as the fire was, it is belived, the work of an incendiary.

Within the past five years there have been five barns burned in the east end of Nittanyvalley and all presicely in the same manner. Not in one case was the true orgin proven and the loss in all cases amounted to considerable.

Hoy's Hennery.

Last winter the papers published an item stating that J. Harris and Ran Hoy expected to go into the chicken raising business this spring and summer, and now it can be said in all truthfulness that they went. They started in early in the spring with something over one hundred blooded fowels and at this time they have just a few over two thousand young chickens. They have all been hatching in incubators and to properly house them requires the room of upwards of forty colony houses. Of course they are not yet through hatching, or incubating, and their flock may be increased another thousand before the season is over. So far they have had very good luck, and have not been troubled with the ravages of any disease among the young chicks. The young men have gone into the business to make as much out of it as possible and by next year they will be able to not only show results but realize a good profit. If all goes well this year they will keep not less than one thousand chickens over next winter and next season will endeavor to raise from twenty to thirty thousand young ones.

With fowls at the price they have been the past few years, and eggs also so high it is easy to be seen that the money that can be made in the business. Up to this time they have not attempted raising turkeys in connection with their chickens.

ECKENROTH BRO.

Bartender Well Known In Bellefonte.

Becoming mentally unbalanced late Sunday evening, Herbert Long, of this city, wandered down Woodlawn avenue a short distance from Third street, and in his delerium he imagined he was in his bed room, removing his clothes and sleeping the remainder of the night on the wet ground and with no protection from the raw wind or the chilling rain. He was found there unconcious at five o'clock Monday morning by Officer Morton and taken to the lockup in a precarious condition. Fortunately the weather had moderated somewhat or he would doubtless have been frozen to death.

Long was a bartender in Murphey's restaurant some years ago, but moved to Bellefonte. He returned to Sunbury some months ago and has resided here since then.

About midnight Sunday he became delirous in Hall's resturant, but left shortly afterwards and it was believed he had gone home until he was found unconcious and almost frozen in the street Monday morning.

Ash Burning Cobbler's Fix.

John Ellmore, of Altoona, "the poor cobbler" who discovered "how to burn ashes," is confronted with three propositions: Either he must sell his secret at a sacrifice, go back to the cobbler's bench or starve.

After the first announcement of the ash-burning secret Ellmore had so many offers for his secret that he thought his fortune was made. Refusing wealth beyond the dream of avarice, he closed his humble shop and gave his time to promoting a $20,000,000 company to manufacture his formula and place it on the market.

The company has fizzled out and meantime Ellmore's store of ready cash has disappeared and he must go to work to provide his family with the necessaries of life.

A Baltimore promoter wants to sell State and city rights to use the formula for Ellmore.

The above is from the Philadelphia Record and indicates that you had better haul out your ashes on the dump.

"Two years ago I became weak and rundown and as time passed I gradually failed until a year ago, when I experienced a stroke of paralysis, which affected one side and I was helpless.

"I called in professional medical treatment, but steadily grew worse.

"I had decided I never would rise again from my bed, but, when Peruna was brought to me and after having taken four bottles of it, I was able to be out and a wonder to myself and friends.

"I consider Peruna a great blessing to the afflicted. I may add that my daughter has also used Peruna and has been blessed with renewed health. I believe Peruna saved our lives."

Clean Up Once a Year.

CLEANING up the body in the spring is a duty everyone owes to himself. Face powders may hide a rough skin, but Peruna helps to produce a skin that need not be hidden.

The source of good blood is good digestion. Peruna aids digestion.

Those people who have regular bodily functions have a clear and delicate skin. Peruna helps to restore these functions.

Most skin deformities depend upon systemic derangements, which cannot be corrected by local treatments.

Peruna is a systemic remedy, reorganizing and regulating the whole body.

Mrs. N. P. Lawler, 423½N. Broadway, Pittsburg, Kas., writes:

"Last spring I caught a severe cold which developed into a serious case of catarrh. I felt weak and sick and could neither eat nor sleep well.

"A member of our club, who had been cured of catarrh through the use of Peruna, advised me to try it and I did so at once.

"I expected help, but nothing like the wonderful change for the better I observed almost as soon as I started taking it.

"In three days I felt much better, and within a week I was well.

"I continued taking the entire bottle and within two weeks I was in fine health."

"Peruna is a wonderful medicine."

Mr. Lee King, R. F. D. No. 4, Farmersville, Tex., writes.

"My health has been better generally this spring and summer than it has been for four years and I have worked nearly every day.

"I suffered with dysentery and bowel trouble.

"Your remedy also cured my wife of constipation.

"I wish you continued success with your great medicine, Peruna."

WHO IS TO BLAME ?

Wreck Near Howard Thursday Morning, Caused Good Bit of Damage.

Thursday morning when the passenger train running from Lock Haven to Tyrone was coming up the valley and near the Howard Brick Works they came in contact with an extra freight.

Both conductors had orders to pass at Milesburg but the freight stalled and could not get over the bump, the flagman of the freight had orders to ride on the passenger and keep on the lookout for the other train. When the conductor of the freight found that they could not get out of the way he went back a little over a hundred yards and flagged the passenger, but they were speeding along at a high rate and the result was a crash. The cab of the freight was demolished and the front of engine damaged so much that it will have to be taken to the hospital for several weeks. Several brakeman were in the cab and when they saw what was coming they cleared a nice piece of ground between the two trains. The fireman on the passenger leaped out o the cab window and made good his escape Frank Mackay a passenger on the moving train, saw the danger and leaped off. Frank is an old time brakeman having worked on the Tyrone Division and knew what was going to happen. Four passengers on the train were injured one man had his wrist sprained another had his chest hurt and another sprained his leg. Most all the passengers were thrown from their seats when the two trains met.

Mrs. Anna Pickard Atkins who has a display of Chinaware at Krumrine's Drug Store today and her assistant Mrs. R. Evans of Chicago were passengers on the train and Mrs. Evans was pretty badly cut on the arm and head, she was taken to the Brockerhoff house where her injuries where attended to by a physician.

A MINISTER? OH NO JUST A DEMOCRAT

P. Gray Meek, of Bellefonte, has Amusing Time in Department Store.

A tall, ministerial-looking gentleman walked into a department store last week on a shopping expedition. Having an eye for the beautiful, he anchored at a counter presided over by an attractive young woman, and made a number of purchases. The young lady did her best to please him and was wholly successful. When the purchases were all made she sized up the soft hat, white necktie and frock coat, and asked, with her best smile:—"Will you have them charged, doctor?"

"No, I'll pay for them," he replied. "But I am not a physician."

"I knew it," responded the girl, "I meant Doctor of Divinity, of course. Now if you will give me your name, I will see that you get your clearical discount." She wrote "Rev." and looked up inquiringly.

The customer's face was covered with a grin, and when he got over his laugh he said:—

"You needen't mind, I am not a minister. I'm a Democrat. Just tell me what I owe you and I'll get out. I've been in politics for fifty years, more or less, and have been called everything in my time, but never before was I mistaken for a minister."

The customer chuckled all the way out of the store and to Broad Street Station, where he boarded a train for Harrisburg. It was State Senator P. Gray Meek, of Bellefonte, for many years secretary of the Democratic State Committee.—Exchange

An Honest Fallowman

In almost every newspaper you pick up you are pretty sure to find a lot of gush about the man behind the counter and the man behind the gun; the man behind the buzz-saw and the man behind the sun; the man behind the times and the man behind his rents; the man behind the plowshare and the man behind the fence; the man behind the whistle and the man pehind the cars; the man behind the kodak and the man behind the bars; the man behind his whiskers and the man behind his fists; and everything is entered on the list. But they've skipped another fellow of whom nothing has been said—the fellow who is even, or a little way ahead; who pays for what he gets, whose bills are always sigued, He's a blamed sight more important than the man who is behind. All the editors and merchants and the whole commercial clan, are indebted for existence to this honest fellowman. He keeps us all in business and his town is never dead, and so we all take off our hats to the man who is a head.

Automobile Broke Down.

On Friday evening A. C. Mingle his wife and several other ladies were coming down the hill nearthe Court House when one of the axels on the large car broke and threw the large machine away to the side of the road. Mrs. Mingle was sitting on the front seat with the Captain and was thrown heavily to the ground. The ladies sitting on the rear seats were also thrown out. Mrs. Mingle was picked up and carried to her home on High street. It is not thought that she is seriously injured although both wrists are sprained and her face fearfully scratched and cut, and her shoulder and body badly bruised. It is certainly a miracle that they all were not killed, and it is a good thing that it happened where it did as the machine was running slow and was easily stopped. It seems as though the axel was hollow and that the thread the burr fits on worn through and broke clear off. It certainly seems strange that a heavy machine like an automobile should be run on a hollow axel. We sincerely hope Mrs. Mingle will speedily recover from her injuries.

Judge Smith's Hot Words

"There are hotel in this town,' said the Court, "that are openly violating the Court's order, and unless they change their manner of doing business I will revoke their licenses. If it's necessary to enforce the rules on the license question by revoking them, we will continue to do so until there will not be one left in the county.

We have been informed that some of the hotels are selling liquor over their bars under the impression that the bottle rule had been revoked. This is a mistake, and I want it distinctly understood that the rule still stands. No bottle will be permitted to be sold over any bar without the jurisdiction of this Court." Public Spirit.

BUR AND BACHELOR.

By TROY ALLISON.

Copyright, 1907, by E. C. Parcells.

Jarvis selected a comfortable looking rock, lit his pipe and leaned against the chestnut tree.

"This is the loneliest spot in the neighborhood," he said, after a meditative puff. "It's my favorite place to become alone and think."

The woman raised her eyebrows quizzically.

"So sorry if I disturb you," tranquilly, "but an old bachelor never knows when he is favored by the gods. It's useless to cater to his pessimism. A woman more or less doesn't increase his misery to any great extent. It was too far for me to come alone, you see."

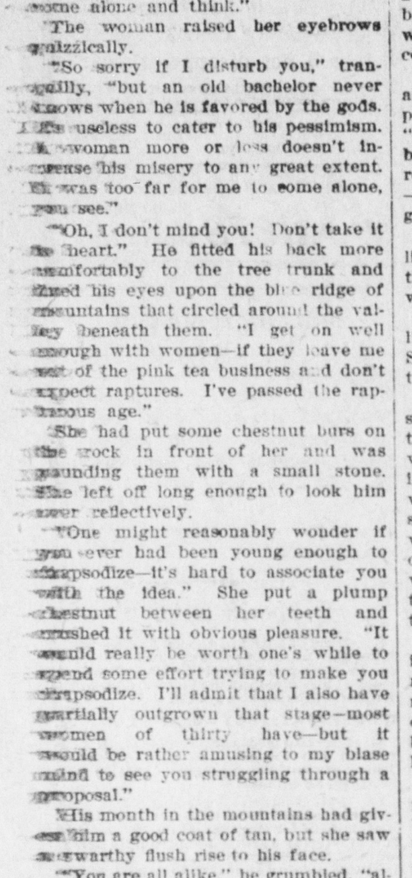
"Oh, I don't mind you! Don't take it to heart." He fitted his back more comfortably to the tree trunk and turned his eyes upon the blue ridge of mountains that circled around the valley beneath them. "I get on well enough with women—if they leave me out of the pink tea business and don't expect raptures. I've passed the rapturous age."

She had put some chestnut burs on the rock in front of her and was pounding them with a small stone. She left off long enough to look him over reflectively.

"One might reasonably wonder if you ever had been young enough to rhapsodize—it's hard to associate you with the idea." She put a plump chestnut between her teeth and crushed it with obvious pleasure. "It would really be worth one's while to expend some effort trying to make you rhapsodize. I'll admit that I also have partially outgrown that stage—most women of thirty have—but it would be rather amusing to my blase mind to see you struggling through a proposal."

His month in the mountains had given him a good coat of tan, but she saw a swarthy flush rise to his face.

"You are all alike," he grumbled, "always wanting compliments and wanting a man to act the fool generally.



SHE GATHERED THE LAST BUR WITHIN HER REACH.

I've only known you a month and was fool enough to think I had found a woman who didn't care for them."

"There is no such woman in existence, dear man." She pounded open another bur energetically. "You need not ever let one fool you in that way. Now, as for me, I have kept you thinking me sensible for a whole month. I let you talk about the isthmian conditions and the trust problems—I even flatter myself that I conversed intelligently enough upon the subject to hold your attention—but as for compliments, I just love 'em!"

Jarvis turned his gaze from the mountain back to her animated face.

"I should have thought you would have grown tired of them long ago," he said in unconscious tribute.

"That does very well, coming from a woman hating bachelor, but it might be improved upon. For instance, the 'long ago' sounds a bit doubtful."

"There the woman speaks again," he grumbled. "She can't bear the idea of any one's even approximating her age. Now, I know you have been a widow seven years, yet you would probably be pleased if I refused to believe you were a day over eighteen."

She gave a little irrepressible gurgle of amusement.

"We don't marry quite so young in our part of the country; but, even so, it's better than reaching the forlorn estate you have achieved."

"It is rather an achievement," he said complacently, "when all one's relatives and friends seem afflicted with a mania for matchmaking."

"Then you should not be so—fascinating," she said, with impudent sarcasm.

He sat erect, bracing both hands on the ground beside him.

"So what?" he shouted in a mirth that set the rocks echoing.

She beat open another bur nonchalantly.

"Oh, well, you are rather good looking, you know. If your manners were a little better you might be—er—a tiny bit fascinating. I am not speaking about your achievements," hastily. "Say, are you trying the compliment racket on me?" he demanded suspiciously.

"No, indeed!" A man of more experience in reading the female expression would have detected too great a show of innocence in her eyes. "I never referred to your looks at all—in fact, I don't know that I should call you exactly good looking, just strong and muscular looking."

This time the flush on his face had a tinge of gratification in it.

"That's all the looks a man has any business caring for," he agreed and felt a sneaking desire to tell her that he had been the star man on the football team at college and that there was not a man at the club now who could bruise him with a boxing glove.

"You see, we are all more or less alike—men and women." She contemplated him from the corner of her eye. "Now, I have a special weakness for being told that my hair has a tinge of red in it, and you like to be called—strong." She again gave a little gurgle of merriment.

"You ought to have been named Delilah," he said in disgust; "there was the very essence of treachery in the way you rounded me up then."

She climbed up the rocks to reach a limb that hung heavy with huge burs. She broke them off gingerly, throwing them one by one at his feet.

"They remind me of old bachelors," she said, holding a large prickly one between her thumb and forefinger, "but with a little experience a woman of intelligence can manage them fairly well and avoid the prickles. I don't suppose, if I hadn't been a widow, with a certain amount of knowledge of the characteristics of man, that I would ever have got you sufficiently tame to have been allowed to take these woodland strolls with you."

There was a glimmer of admiration in his eyes as she stood on the gray, moss covered rock, her slim figure reaching up to the deep green of the chestnut bough. She gathered the last bur within her reach and threw it at him energetically.

"That is for you to keep as a souvenir," she commenced, but her voice broke in a gasp of alarm as she lost her footing on the mossy rock and fell on the ledge below.

Jarvis, his face anxious and white, lifted her gently, and her head fell on his shoulder.

He gazed helplessly until the stillness of the woods grew oppressive.

"My dear; oh, my dear," he said anxiously, putting his cheek against hers, "if you would only open your eyes—your beautiful eyes."

The corners of her mouth betrayed her to an involuntary smile. She gave him one look, then put her head back on his shoulder.

"I'm not hurt—much." There was a mixture of emotions in the mirth of her voice. "But I do so love to hear you say that, and I told you that neither a bur nor a bachelor was hard to manage—if one knew how."

Decay of Laughter In England.

I am perfectly certain that half our ills are due to the fact that we do not laugh enough. A good, sincere smile is something rare in these times, a "laughing face" is scarce, and it is seldom indeed that one hears a good, ringing laugh.—London World.

Women as Well as Men Are Made Miserable by Kidney Trouble.

Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased.

Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose.

Women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy. The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold by druggists, in fifty-cent and one dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also pamphlet telling all about it, including many of the thousands of testimonial letters received from sufferers cured. In writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure and mention this paper.

If any one has any doubt as to the virtue of Foley's Kidney Cure, they need only to refer to Mr. Alvin Stimpson, of Willimantic, Conn., who after almost losing hope of recovery, on account of the failure of so many remedies, finally tried Foley's Kidney Cure, which he says was "just the thing" for him, as four bottles cured him completely. He is now entirely well and free from all suffering incident to acute kidney trouble.

Kidney complaint kills more people than any other disease. This is due to the disease being so insidious that it gets a good hold on the system before it is recogoized. Foley's Kidney Cure will prevent the development of fatal disease if taken in time.

Orino Laxative Fruit Syrup is best for women and children. Its mild action and pleasant tase makes it preferable to violent purgatives such as pills, tablets, etc. Get the booklet and a sample of Oreno at C. M. Parrish.

Coming to His Title.

Titles have rarely been conferred upon native Americans by European sovereigns, but several have succeeded to titles by inheritance. One of these was Sir John Davie, the first town clerk of Groton, Conn., who was graduated at Harvard in 1681. The story of his reception of the news of his succession to a baronetcy is told in the pages of "In Old Connecticut."

One day Davie was hoeing corn on the plains in company with John Packer, a neighbor, both men in homespun and barefooted, with their sleeves rolled up to their elbows and their trousers up to their knees, when a stranger clad in the latest London fashion appeared and asked the official if he were John Davie.

"Yes," was the reply.

"Then I salute you, Sir John Davie of Creedy Park, Devon," said the visitor.

Tradition says that the new baronet finished his row—he was hoeing on a wager with his fellow worker—then he accompanied his visitor to the brown homestead, treated him to cake and wine and learned the whole story—how his uncle, Sir John Davie, Bart., had died without male issue, leaving his nephew sole heir.

In a short time the Poquonock farmer exchanged the brown farmhouse for an English estate. He never forgot his native land, however, and always retained his interest in Groton. He aided the settlers to build their new church and when it was finished presented it with a silver communion set. He also made gifts to his relatives and was one of the early benefactors of Yale college.

Hunting In Bygone Days.

What long apprenticeship the would be huntsmen had to serve in bygone days! Gaston de Foix considered a beginning should be made when the child had reached the age of seven, when it should be placed in the kennels. King Charles says that to become a perfect huntsman the young gentilhomme who is intended for the post of veneur should be taken at the age of twelve. He must be healthy and well built: he must have good sense and especially a quick and prompt judgment. One of the principal things required is that he should be painstaking. Alas, 150 years later we have D'Yauville telling us that a man needs two years' tuition to qualify as a huntsman! It was not only the paid gentlemen of the hunting establishments, however, who became real connoisseurs, for their royal masters took such personal interest in everything connected with the chase that most of them knew all their hounds by name and on the eve of a day's hunting would name each hound that was to be taken out. They also prided themselves on being able to faire le bois themselves—that is, go out with their lymers in the morning and quest for and harbor the stag.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Samp and How to Cook It.

Samp is one of the most delicious and appetizing of all corn products or by-products.

Give us the bowl of samp and milk
By homespun beauty poured!

So sang Whittier. Whittier didn't know how to eat. He lived on air. The very suggestion of milk with samp is nauseating. It is worse than mush and milk and grits and cream. Roger Williams knew all about samp, and this is how he had it cooked: Crack the corn into about four pieces to the grain. Soak it all night in water. Skim off the skims which float in water. Boil on a slow fire until tender, with a piece of salt pork in the pot. When the water is dried out, introduce some good butter, some salt and pepper and serve hot. The Indians of Massachusetts used any kind of fresh meat for a flavoring and called the dish "saupac." You may have all your oatmeal, hominy, grits, mush, meal, polenta, etc., but let me have the samp—when I can't get "lye hominy."—New York Press.

The Old English Dames' Schools.

The descriptions of some of the dames' and other schools of the early part of the nineteenth century are exceedingly interesting. Many of these ancient teachers were unable to write an intelligent answer to a simple question. One on being asked as to the terms on which she gave instruction replied: "Not understanding the question, I answer thus: With a view of reading the Bible." We have the authority of the late Lord Shaftesbury for the statement that one of these poor creatures, being asked if she gave moral instruction to her scholars, replied, "No, I can't afford it at 3 shillings a week." A more amusing answer, however, was that of the teacher who was asked whether proper attention was paid to the morals of the boys under his care. His answer was that "they did not teach morals there, as they belonged to the girls' department."—Westminster Gazette.

The Goat's Change of Faith.

Near a small Baptist church not far out of the city there lives an old Irishman who keeps a goat. One day, finding the church door open, the goat wandered inside and browsed around among cushions and books, much to the detriment of those articles. The pastor chanced to catch the animal at his mischief and lost no time in going to the owner to complain. "You will have to keep that goat tied up," began the minister. "He went into my church just now and"— But we was allowed to proceed no further. The old Irishman held up both hands in amazement. "Wint into your church, did he? Thin I can't be responsible for him no more, th' ongrateful baste. If that goat has turned Protestant I wash me hands of him."—New York Times.

Constipation

Baked sweet apples, with some people, bring prompt relief for Constipation. With others, coarse all-wheat bread will have the same effect. Nature undoubtedly has a vegetable remedy to relieve every ailment known to man, if physicians can but find Nature's way to health. And this is strikingly true with regard to Constipation.

The bark of a certain tree in California—Cascara Sagrada—offers a most excellent aid to this end. But, combined with Egyptian Senna, Slippery Elm Bark, Solid Extract of Prunes, etc., this same Cascara bark is given its greatest possible power to correct constipation. A toothsome Candy Tablet, called Lax-ets, is now made at the Dr. Shoop Laboratories, from this ingenuous and most effective prescription. Its effect on Constipation, Biliousness, Sour Stomach, Bad Breath, Sallow Complexion, etc., is indeed prompt and satisfying.

No griping, no unpleasant after effects are experienced, and Lax-ets are put up in beautiful lithographed metal boxes at 5 cents and 25 cents per box.

Consumption Pronounced the Worst Curse That The Profession has to Contend With Dr. Wiley on Pure Food

DR. J. L. SEIBERT IS ATTENDING

Atlantic City, June 7. -The House of Delegates, the governing body of the American Medical Association, adjourned Thursday to meet next year in Chicago The following officers were elected.

President, Dr. L Burrell, Boston; first vice president, Dr. Edwin Walker, Evansville, Ind.; second vice president, Dr. Hiram B. Burton, Lewes, Del.; third vice president. Dr. George W. Crile, Cleveland; fourth vice president, Dr. J. Blair Stewart, Atlantic City; secretary, Dr. George H. Simmons, Chicago; treasurer, Dr. Frank Billings, Chicago; Drs. T. J. Happle, Trenton, Tenn; W. W. Grant, Denver, and Philip Marvel, were elected to the board of trustees their terms having expired with the present meeting. The board consists of nine members, six of whem will come up for election at the Chicago meeting next year.

A number of reports were presented to the session Thursday, among them being one which was adopted pledging the the American Medical Association to lend its influence to the physicians of the southern states in their endeavor to secure an enlargement of the high school terms from three to four years,

A symposium of tuberculosis was held Thursday afternoon by the section on hygiene and sanitary science. A number of physicians addressed the meeting.

One of the speakers declared that consumption was the worst curse the medical profession had to contend with. Dr. Livingston Farrand, of New York, told of the various methods being used in the cities of New York state to stamp out the disease and said the work was meeting with success.

Dr. Wiley, of Washington, head of national pure food department, who was to have read a paper before the section was unable to attend and his paper was read by another delegate. Dr. William J. Robinson, of New York objected to the reading of the paper in the absence of Dr. Wiley except by title. After much discussion in an endeavor to have Dr. Robison withdraw his objection the section took a recess during which the paper was read. It required unanimous consent to have paper read in the absence of the author and Dr. Robison declared that he based his objection on the ground that a writer should attend the meetings in person. Dr. Wiley's paper was devoted to the efforts the government is making to suppress the manufacture and sale af impure drugs.

Note Found Husband.

As a sequel to a romance courtship between a Williamsport girl and a prominent lithographer of Rockville, Ill., came the marriage of Miss Maud Bussom and James P. Adams, at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. S. E. Metzer, Tuesday evening.

There is a quaint bit of story connected with the meeting, the wooing and the winning of the maiden by Mr. Adams. During Miss Bussom's employment at the Lycoming clothing factory, of Williamsport, she placed a slip of paper in a pocket of a pair of trousers with a postscript to the effect that the finder of the paper should write her

Buying the trousers in his Western city, the bridegroom followed instructions and soon the millionaire had become infatuated with the winsome little factory maiden. The infatuation ripened into love in lightning order and the announcement of the engagement was the second chapter in the little love tale.

Rev. J. K. Lloyd performed the ceremony that completed the romance. The couple will live in Rockville, Ill., where the bridegroom is a popular citizen and one of the well-known monyed men of the section.

Nature Gives Timely Warning That No Bellefonte Citizen Can Afford to Ignore.

Mrs. Nancy Davis, of 246 East Logan Street, says: "I suffered a bad fall some years ago when living in Rochester. I thought at first that I had broken my back. I was unable to get up without assistance and from that time I suffered for years with a weak back and excruciating pains through the loins and through the small of my back. Sometimes I was completely prostrated and helpless. Doctors and medicines failed to help me and the pain continued until I got Doan's Kidney Pills. THEIR WEDDING DAY

By TEMPLE BAILEY.

Copyright, 1907, by P. C. Eastment.

Her wedding gown was Mary's first pretty dress. All her little girl life she had worn the cut down and pieced together garments of Leila and Margaret.

Leila and Margaret were the handsome sisters. Mary was little and thin, her one beauty a thick braid of red gold hair that she wound about her head like a coronet.

When she slipped the shining wedding dress over her shoulders and looked at herself in the glass she laughed a little.

"Why, I'm almost pretty," she said to her sisters.

Leila and Margaret were dressed in pink. They were to be her bridesmaids, and they carried big bunches of carnations.

"I DIDN'T LOVE HER AS I DID YOU, MARY."

Mary's bouquet was of lilies of the valley and violets.

"Wasn't it nice that Walter remembered?" she said.

"Remembered what?" Margaret asked.

"That I liked violets."

"You aren't the first girl of Walter's that has liked violets," Leila told her.

Mary flushed.

"I don't think Walter has had so many girls that you need to say that, Leila," she said.

"Leila's eyes sparkled above the pink carnations.

"Oh, well, of course you aren't the first."

"Perhaps not the very first that he thought he liked." Mary said slowly, "but the first he really wanted to marry."

"Walter doesn't tell everything," Leila said meaningly.

Mary turned away from the glass.

"I guess they're waiting for us," she said, and then they went downstairs together.

Every one said it was a pretty wedding, but the bride was rather pale.

"But then Mary never did have much color," was the conclusion of the village folks, who pinned their faith in beauty to the rosy milkmaid variety and had little admiration for Mary's delicacy and pallor.

Walter spoke of it on the way to the station.

"You ought to have had red cheeks for me today, Mary," he said, and she trembled a little as he laid his hand over hers.

They went to the city, reaching there after dark. In their room at the quiet hotel they found flowers—violets and narcissus sent by one of Walter's business friends.

"I told him you liked violets," Walter said as he helped her off with her coat and kissed her.

Mary, with her hat still on, stood by the table and looked at the flowers. Suddenly she asked, "Who was the other girl who liked violets?"

"The other girl?"

He was on the opposite side of the table, smiling at her, his boyish face a little tremulous with the thought of the place and the hour. "There was never any other girl, Mary," he said.

"Leila said there was," she persisted, "and you used to send her violets."

"Leila?" he stammered.

"Yes, Leila," she said.

He came around the table and took her hands. "You will not let what Leila said spoil our wedding day, will you?"

"She said you hadn't told me everything," Mary said, "and I think I ought to know."

His eyes stopped before her steady glance.

"Leila shouldn't have said anything."

"Who was the girl?" She laid her hand on his arm and shook it a little. "Who was the girl, Walter?"

He looked down at her, troubled.

"It was Leila," he said finally, and his face was white.

"Oh!" Mary gasped. "Oh, Walter!"

He thought she was going to cry. She dropped into a chair and sat there shaking and trembling, but she did not cry.

Walter knelt beside her. "I didn't love her as I did you, Mary," he whispered.

"But you loved her, and you would have married her, and she would have been here if you had had your way."

Mary accused him, "here on your wedding day."

He tried to take her hand, but she drew back and hid her face in the cushions of the chair. "And Leila is so much prettier than I am, she said between quick breaths.

In another moment she was sobbing wildly. "You ought to have told me."

"Hush," he said, with his hands on her shoulders. "Hush!" And there was a man's masterfulness in his tone.

"Look at me, Mary." He drew her up out of the chair and held her hands so that she could not put them over her face. "Look at me."

"I ought not to have told you," he said, as she, still sobbing, lifted her heavy lids and met his glance. "You are wrong. I ought not to have told you. No one should have told you. I ought not to tell you now—no man has a right to talk of these things—but Leila has brought it on herself. I was nice to her, and I thought I loved her, and I told her so, and at last we were engaged."

"Oh!" Mary said and drew away, but he held her firmly.

"And I did send her violets, but after awhile I began to send her roses, big scentless ones, and she asked me why, but I did not like to tell her that it was because she reminded me of them; that I had not found any sweetness or fragrance in her, and that I dreaded the day when I must take her to my heart—and then, oh, Mary—you came." He paused and went on, with a break in his voice: "The first time I saw you after you came home from teaching in the country I knew you were the girl I had been looking for all my life. And one day I told Leila. I don't suppose it was the thing that a man would do in a story book or in a play. They always marry the wrong ones, you know. But I felt that marriage without love would be as bad for Leila as for me, and I knew by that time that she did not really care for me"—

"Leila didn't let any one know of the engagement, and so when it came to an end there wasn't any talk. But Leila couldn't forget me—and if she had left it alone you need never have known, you needn't have been unhappy, you needn't have distrusted me"—

Mary's face was hidden against his coat.

"I've been unhappy all day," she whispered.

"On our wedding day? Mary"—

"I'm sorry," she whispered again.

Outside the night deepened and darkened. The house had grown quiet; the noise of the busy streets was stilled.

He lifted his head, with a little laugh that had in it a deeper ring than that of gayety. "I'm not sorry," he said, "for now the last barrier of distrust is down, and you are mine and I am yours, and ahead of us is only happiness—Mary"—

A Good Reason.

Manders is very severe on his little son. He says that the boy has got to grow up a sensible member of society, and he (Manders) will see that he does. He had just spoken very sharply to the boy for asking questions without thinking what he was asking, and Tommy was sitting in the corner with his eyes fixed on the ceiling.

"Do you think you will get a prize for good conduct at school, Tommy?" asked mamma, anxious to create a diversion.

"I don't think so, ma," responded Tommy timidly.

"How's that?" asked Manders sternly before mamma could interfere. "Haven't you been behaving yourself? Why won't you get a prize for good conduct? Answer me at once."

"Cos they don't give any, father," answered the boy.

Father was caught himself, and when he saw his wife smile he went out and slammed the door after him.—Pearson's Weekly.

Trials of the Unemployed.

Once there was a young Boetian who had money. One day he looked at his clothes, of which he had a great many, and he saw that they needed to be brushed and folded, so he told his servant to do it for him. Then he went downstairs and noticed that all his manuscripts were in disorder, so he hired a man to sort them out and to make a list of them. Next he went to the stable and found one of his horses sick, so he asked a man to get him another one. The other horse needed exercise, so he engaged a groom to exercise the horse.

He looked at a puppy which he had and said, "Why, it's time that puppy was trained to find birds," so he sent the puppy away to a man to be taught.

Then he went into the house and yawned. "Dear me," said he, "how dull it is with nothing to do! I wish I had something to do."

The Boetians were barbarians.—Puck.

Spoiled.

"Publishers insist on spoiling a great many manuscripts, don't they?" said the literary young woman.

"Undoubtedly," answered the bookseller. "A lot of 'em look a heap better typewritten and tied up with a ribbon than they do in print."—Washington Star.

All That Saved Him.

"Yes, sir, he was obliged to go in the snake country, so he took a gallon of Georgia corn along with him."

"And how did he make out?"

"Splendid! Got so full and wabbled so the snakes missed him every time they struck at him!"—Atlanta Constitution.

KAPPA DELTA PI BANQUET.

Was held at the Bush House Tuesday Evening.

The new chapter of the Kappa Delta Pi of the Bellefonte Academy held their first annual banquet at the Bush House on Tuesday evening. It was a very elaborate affair and was greatly enjoyed by all present.

The menu was gotten up in royal style and speaks well for this popular hostelry. Proprietor Daggett and his wife understand thoroughly what pleases the people and on this occasion they seemed to out do all previous suppers. The banquet table was set for eighteen persons. In the centre were beautiful bouquets of white carnations, orange blossoms and snow balls. Green candles were set at different places over the table and when lit, the green and white presented a sight of rare beauty. At ten o'clock the club sat down to the banquet table and for two hours this is what they ate.

Put Iron Gates Up.

The space around the sides and rear of the court house has lately become sort of a retreat for boozers and loafers. And often times there fellows went back where it was dark and no one could see them and commit nuisances that were a detriment to the health of the officials at the Court House. It got so bad that you could hardly walk around this public building. And in the dark the fellows could take their little bottles and go back there and and drink to their hearts content. It was certainly a nuisance in every sence of the word. So now the commissioners are having heavy iron gates put up at the entrances of these walks, and if the "boozerines" get back their now, they will have to crawl over the fence.

Big Wedding at Linden Hall.

The beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Rose at Linden Hall was the scene of a very happy affair on Wednesday evening, when their daughter Miss Ella was united in marriage to Mr. George Mothersbaugh of Boalsburg. Rev. Stonecypher performed the ceremony, he was assisted by Rev. Black and Rev. Glenn, after which an excellent dinner was served to the great number of guests. The wedding march was played by Miss Luella Rose. Mr. and Mrs. Mothersbaugh drove to Bellefonte where they boarded a train for Renova. May their lives abound with joy and happiness.
